The upstate is set against a majestic backdrop of thousands of years-old mountains, long beaches, huge waterfalls, and huge lakes, and Downstate hosts arguably the most famous financial district, the arts and entertainment industry, and the island cities of New York, New York and New York. In addition to all this, New York State Of course, one of the best parts of life in the 21st century is that residents from almost everywhere can choose to attend college almost anywhere, so that anyone in upstate can attend college in the downstate, and vice versa, from the privacy of all their homes. To be sure, there are a number of reasons why an increasing number of students prefer to earn a degree online and as residents of their state. One of the reasons is that you can apply in-state tuition to public schools that offer online programs. Many online programs offer more support services that are available to local students by demanding face-to-face interactions or by using them close to offline locations. In addition, intensive learning experiences that often occur on weekends or in weekly competitions can help many online students accelerate their graduation time. Looking at online training opportunities can dramatically expand the options available to students in other locales by looking at locally available hybrid online/field degrees (i.e., programs that are partially or mostly available online). Finally, one of the most common regulations in scholarships is that students are from a specific state or region. Many of New York's top public schools offer online learning programs, from associate's degrees to master's degrees. Eight of the State University of New York (SUNY) institutions offer at least one online bachelor's degree. These are SUNY Empire State, SUNY Institute of Technology in Delhi, SUNY Institute of Technology in Canton, SUNY Technical College in Alfred, SUNY College in Plattsburgh, SUNY College in Oswego, SUNY College in Onontata, Fashion Institute of Technology, or FIT. For those who want to save money and transfer to a four-year jeffrogram, seven of the 15 New York community colleges offer at least one fully online associate's degree. All states offer older programs with four-year programs, and some offer advanced certificates. SUNY Empire State offers the largest number of online master's degrees among public colleges and universities at age 12, with the largest number of bachelor's degrees in the same group at age 13. Many online products are available through private universities in New York. From time to time, more than 37 private colleges and universities offer online degree programs across the state, offering degrees that range from associate's degrees to Doctorates. In terms of scope From peers to PhDs, Touro College offers at least one peer, bachelor's, master's and doctoral programs online. Pace and Adelphi University follow closely, Pace offers online programs at the bachelor's level at the Doctoral level and Adelphi offers online programs at the peer level at the master's level. Syracuse University is the state's most prestigious private university with online offerings, providing access to 14 online programs (7 bachelor's and 7 masters) as the 61st ranked national university in 2016, according to US News. Compared to other countries in New York, New York is one of the most expensive states in terms of the cost of higher education. In 2014-2015, the country's average annual tuition for full-time undergraduate students was $17,125, which is $3,859 higher than the national average. During that year, Sarah Lawrence was the most expensive institution to attend college at $49,680 per year, while attending college as the most expensive popular at New York University at $43,746 per year. On the other hand, this price is fairly average as national norms move on attendance costs to private colleges and universities. And if you're in a state rich in part-time and online options, online students won't pay sticker prices near this high, especially those who can find public colleges or universities that can afford in-state rates or offer special scholarships for ongoing education. For example, SUNY in Albany, a top-150 ranking national university, came in well off state average tuition at $6,170, which is largely representative of other public offerings in the state.
